Exploring Websites Part I

Aarya Kini & June Bee

Website 1 - Bjarke Ingels Group

BIG is a famous architecture firm recruited by Copenhagen and New York based architects, designers and builders operating within the fields of architecture, urbanism, research and development. We choose BIG's webpage because it has a creative interactive design that organizes mass information in one page with graphical logic. For example, this home page contains all the projects that BIG had created in the past with simple icons allowing the audience to explore within their interest. The layout was straightforward but extremely effective visually.

Website 2 - The Washington Post

The Washington Post is an American daily newspaper published in Washington, D.C and is the most-widely circulated newspaper within the Washington metropolitan area. Their website – washingtonpost.com – was launched in June 1996. We chose the Washington Post website for this assignment, as compared to the one for the Bjarke Ingels Group, this website is quite different in the sense that it contains a lot more information on a single page and is organised in a much denser fashion. Consequently, we believed that working on this website would be a good opportunity to learn more about how to approach the structure of such a site, as well as experiment more with the link and style tags.
